Training to Support Neurodivergent Pupils

Built on Experience: I bring more than 25 years in secondary teaching, including middle leadership and whole-school responsibility for CPD. Across my teaching, leadership and coaching roles, I have supported young people with ADHD, autism and a range of learning and support needs.

Alongside my professional experience, I bring lived experience of ADHD, both personally and as a parent.

My training combines a realistic understanding of classroom life with the insight I gain through ADHD coaching. With a particular focus on ADHD, autism and overlapping needs, it offers practical approaches staff can use straight away, supported by the understanding to adapt them to individual pupils.

Training Options: Training can be adapted to suit your setting and training requirements.

Length of Training Offer	Content	Price
One Hour Session	A focussed session on an agreed topic with practical strategies staff can use in their setting.	£250*
Half-day workshop: (2.5 hours)	An interactive training workshop with practical activities, discussion, sharing of best practice and case studies.	£450*
Full Day in Person (5 Hours)	Understanding neurodivergent pupils: exploring brain development, executive function and how these affect learning and behaviour. Followed by a practical workshop using case studies, discussion and activities to help staff adapt approaches in the classroom.	£750*

*Travel within a 20-mile radius of Ormskirk is included in the training fee. Additional travel costs apply beyond this area and will be agreed when booking.

Half-day and full-day timings exclude breaks and will be agreed with your school.

To discuss your school's requirements or enquire about availability, contact Louise Belshaw:
Info@the-adhd-teacher.co.uk